Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

Western Region

Thursday, September 8

- Dangerous and record-setting heat will persist for much of the state through Friday with cooler conditions returning for the weekend
  - Widespread high to very high heat risk impacts will occur in many areas, with daytime temperatures reaching the 80s and 90s near the coast and 100 to 115°F inland. Overnight lows will remain very warm in the 70s and 80s.
- Fire weather conditions remain highly elevated to locally critical for many areas through Friday, particularly in and around the mountains and foothills
  - Areas of more widespread critical fire weather conditions are expected across the Modoc Plateau and the Klamath Mountains on Saturday as stronger winds occur
  - Gusty offshore winds across southern California will bring increased fire weather concerns on Friday
- Tropical Cyclone Kay will move north toward the Southern California coast Thursday into Friday. Southern CA will be dealing with the fringes of the storm, and it is important to note this is not expected to be a direct landfall of the tropical cyclone.
  - Strong easterly winds will bring increased fire weather concerns for southern California before moisture and rain chances increase later on Friday and continue Saturday.
  - Heavy rain is expected across the southern California mountains and deserts, with potential for flooding, especially for burn scars
  - Moisture will slowly move north across central California and the Sierras, bringing an increased chance for more widespread showers and thunderstorms. There is still potential for thunderstorms with little precipitation, therefore increasing the potential for new fire starts
